San José welcomes Bolivian leader

Leónida Zurita

The most influential woman peasant leader in Bolivia will talk about the struggle that led up to the historic victory in the December 18, 2005 Presidential election and the challenge they face today. A reception in her honor will take place on:

Friday, March 3rd 6:00 pm

SEIU 715 Hall, 2302 Zanker Rd, San José

The combined movements of Bolivian agricultural and mine workers and the majority indigenous population have just achieved the unprecedented election of Evo Morales as Bolivia's first indigenous president. Leónida Zurita, his long-time associate and considered to be the most influential woman peasant leader in Bolivia, will be in San José to talk about the struggle that led up to the historic victory and the challenges they face today.
