

Urban and Organic Agriculture in Cuba

Cuba faced a period of serious crisis after the collapse of the Soviet Union. To overcome the crisis and to feed its people, it directed its energies to developing urban and organic agriculture. It was not only able to solve all its agricultural problems, but became the world leader in the field. Dr. Koont will tell about Cuba's achievements and how Venezuela has also been learning from them.

Dr. Sinan Koont teaches economics at Dickinson Collage in Carlisle, Pennsylvania where he has written extensively on Latin America, including two papers on Cuba in Monthly Review. He spent three and a half months (January-May 2007) in Cuba researching urban agriculture and food security and three weeks in Venezuela.

Monday, July 16

6:30 pm - Light refreshments and reception

7:00 pm - Presentation by Dr. Sinan Koont

Join us!

San José Peace Center

48 South Seventh St., San José
$5 - $10 donation — Students free
(No one turned away for lack of funds)

Sponsored by:

South Bay Mobilization (www.sbm4peace.org)
San José Peace Center (www.sanjosepeace.org)
International Discussion Group

Urban and Organic Agriculture in Cuba

Cuba faced a period of serious crisis after the collapse of the Soviet Union. To overcome the crisis and to feed its people, it directed its energies to developing urban and organic agriculture. It was not only able to solve all its agricultural problems, but became the world leader in the field. Dr. Koont will tell about Cuba's achievements and how Venezuela has also been learning from them.

Dr. Sinan Koont teaches economics at Dickinson Collage in Carlisle, Pennsylvania where he has written extensively on Latin America, including two papers on Cuba in Monthly Review. He spent three and a half months (January-May 2007) in Cuba researching urban agriculture and food security and three weeks in Venezuela.

Monday, July 16

6:30 pm - Light refreshments and reception

7:00 pm - Presentation by Dr. Sinan Koont

Join us!

San José Peace Center

48 South Seventh St., San José
$5 - $10 donation — Students free
(No one turned away for lack of funds)

Sponsored by:

South Bay Mobilization (www.sbm4peace.org)
San José Peace Center (www.sanjosepeace.org)
International Discussion Group